CCIG Group Safety Program Helps Companies Lower Workers' Compensation Costs

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Nov. 18, 2019

ENGLEWOOD, COLO. – CCIG, one of the nation's leading independent insurance brokerages, has been certified as a provider of a group workplace safety program designed to help employers lower their workers' compensation costs.

Employers that qualify for the program earn a 4% discount on their workers' compensation premiums.

The Colorado Safety Association and Pinnacol Assurance established the program to bring together groups of businesses with common risks to help them improve their safety and claims management practices.

Along with the discount, employers in the program also can earn a dividend, a portion of premium returned to them based on the safety record of the safety group program's members.

To be eligible, companies must have been in business at least three years. They also must maintain a minimum loss ratio established by the program, as well as demonstrate a commitment to maintaining and enhancing a safe workplace.

CCIG's risk management offerings include an online Risk Management Center that includes state-of-the-art behavior-based safety programs, incident tracking, return-to-work programs and insurance certificate tracking.

About CCIG: Founded in 1985, CCIG is based in Englewood, Colo., and employs a team of 100 insurance professionals. We are recognized as one of the leading insurance brokerages in the U.S., providing property and casualty, risk management, surety, employee health benefit plans and wealth management services to individual and business clients nationwide. CCIG has won repeated Best Places to Work and Top Workplace awards and has been repeatedly recognized as a Best Practices Agency by the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers of America.
